Lawn Care TIP for Residents of Detached Homes

To ensure that nutrients can reach the soil under your grass, you should aerate your lawn each early fall. Aeration involves perforating the lawn with small holes. It alleviates soil compaction, which prevents the proper circulation of air, water, and nutrients and starves grass roots.

You can buy or rent an aerator from a garden supply store or home improvement center. Home Depot sells them, with a starting price of @ $20.00. Make sure your soil is moist, the day after you water your lawn or there's a rain shower. After you aerate you can apply fertilizer and grass seed and look forward to a beautiful lawn.
